The Gambling Question

Goldfield officials are having trouble with the gambling question and the announcement has been made that hereafter saloons in which gambling games are found will have their licenses revoked by county officials.

Gambling has been a troublesome question in Nevada ever since the enactment of the anti-gambling law four years ago. The act was intended to stop the evil, but it is agreed that little good has been accomplished. The Bonanza does not intend to pose as benign in favor of gambling. This paper is opposed to the return of open gambling, but realizing that it is an utter impossibility to prevent the playing of poker, a game that authorities are divided upon regarding whether it is gambling or to the contrary, it is safe to assume that games of this sort will be conducted wherever men gather.

There is only one solution to the affair, and that is for the officials to make monthly raids upon all gambling games, arrest the dealers and inflict a nominal fine for the violation of the law. Should this plan be carried out the county and state will receive revenue. If the plan is not followed the county and state will receive nothing and the poker games will be conducted, notwithstanding the violation of the law. No force on earth can prevent men from playing poker, and it is far better to have the game run in the open, where every player has an even chance than to encourage a game behind closed doors where the unwary can be fleeced of every cent that they possess. Poker has been played in Nevada ever since man emigrated to the confines of this commonwealth. Poker was played before the anti-gambling law went into effect, and has been played since that law was enacted. The game has been played in Tonopah, Goldfield, Reno, Carson and in fact every town and camp within the state. The state police attempted to prevent the game being indulged in, with but poor success. Trial after trial has been had in the various courts and the convictions that have been obtained can easily be counted upon the fingers of one hand.

There is absolutely no way in which to prevent the game, and with this realization it is up to the authorities to make the best of the matter. The state lost revenue through the enactment of the anti-gambling law, and now there is an opportunity to make up the losses by the levying of a monthly fine against all persons who conduct games. Let the fine be nominal, let the treasury be enriched to this extent, and conditions will be no worse and possibly no better than are found to exist today.

Republican Reunion

We are glad to see that the harmonizing talk from Washington contemplates leaving the meeting of the republican national harmony convention until next year. The time since the bitter feeling of last year has not been long enough to obliterate that feeling, and so far nothing has occurred of sufficient importance to force the protection sentiment of this country together to save business and prosperity against the inroads of the proposed democratic tariff revision. By next year this last named proposition will be so keenly felt and so urgent before the people that there will be something so important for all protectionists to do that they will be able to get together and do it.

It is a good idea to have the national committee meet; it is excellent to have the senators and representatives have preliminary conferences in regard to this matter; but the real business of getting together, as we have stated from the first, had better be left until next year. If the effort to get into harmony is pushed too soon and too hard, friction will inevitably ensue, and the danger of failure on reunion will be very great. The lesson of the alleged harmony convention in Chicago recently is enough to prove this. That convention demonstrated that the political sores of last year are not sufficiently healed to allow of a genuine reunion this year.

We are glad to see that the protection sentiment of this country is waking up, and that the old republican doctrine of protection is likely to furnish the platform upon which all former republicans can get together on protection lines, and for the upbuilding of the business of this country so prosperous heretofore, tempered with a revision of the tariff on protection lines such as the republicans party ought to have given to this country when it undertook to revise the tariff in 1909.

Cost of Living and Bugs

The increased cost of living among the different people of the world is a pressing question everywhere. Various devices have been employed to solve this question. A story from Quito that the people there and in other places in Ecuador are eating toasted June bugs, shows the solution that the people there have hit upon, as reported to their great satisfaction. This report causes the San Francisco Chronicle to tell the following little June bug story.

"Everyone recalls the story of the June bug that lighted upon the collar of a boy in church and, having folded up its suit case, settled down to sleep through the sermon. The boy's mother, averse to seeing anything asleep in church, took it between the thumb and forefinger and passed it on to her husband, who was expected to throw it out of the window. The husband, thinking it was the peppermint his wife usually handed him when he became drowsy, put it in his mouth. He said it was the greatest eye-opener he ever had."

MUST WRAP CASTINGS TO PROTECT MAIL

A bulletin with reference to parcel post has been issued by the postoffice department and sent to all postmasters, cautioning them that stove castings, plow points, pieces of machinery, etc., should be well wrapped to prevent damage to mail and equipment by their sharp points and rough edges.
